Review

Language Creation and Language Change provides a stimulating discussion of the relationship between Creole languages and language development. It contains a variety of viewpoints and a wealth of empirical material concerning this fascinating problem. The volume illuminates and connects work in a variety of fields--from developmental psycholinguistics to linguistic theory to Creole studies to historical linguistics. DeGraff does much to integrate the contributions.

(Ken Wexler, Professor of Psychology and Linguistics, Department of Brain and Cognitive Sciences and Department of Linguistics and Philosophy, MIT)

For decades, linguists have taken it for granted that the process of creolization should serve as a bridge between theories of language acquisition and theories of language change. However, until now no single volume had ever attempted to tie all three issues together, nor to explore the implications of their mutual interaction for the nature of grammar. Michel DeGraff's Language Creation and Language Change does all of this and more. Each of the 15 contributions, written by the world's leading creolists and generative grammarians, breaks new theoretical ground. The field owes DeGraff a resounding 'thank you', not only for assembling an anthology of such remarkably high quality, but for his own skillful commentary that both synthesizes and critiques the diverse opinions that the authors present in their individual contributions.

(Frederick J. Newmeyer, Professor and Chair, Department of Linguistics, University of Washington)

"This book represents an impressive range of informative reports on the development of languages through change, creolization, and creation, including the important story of the emergence of Sign Language in Nicaragua, a major event in the lives of the people affected and in the history of scientific language scholarship." Kenneth L. Hale, Ferrari P. Ward Professor of Modern Languages and Linguistics, Linguistic Theory, Amerindian and Australian Languages, Massachusetts Institute of Technology

LANGUAGE CREATION AND LANGUAGE CHANGE:
CREOLIZATION, DIACHRONY, AND DEVELOPMENT
(LEARNING, DEVELOPMENT, AND CONCEPTUAL CHANGE)
BY MICHEL PDF

Research on creolization, language change, and language acquisition has been converging toward a triangulation of the constraints along which grammatical systems develop within individual speakers--and (viewed externally) across generations of speakers. The originality of this volume is in its comparison of various sorts of language development from a number of linguistic-theoretic and empirical perspectives, using data from both speech and gestural modalities and from a diversity of acquisition environments. In turn, this comparison yields fresh insights on the mental bases of language creation. The book is organized into five parts: creolization and acquisition; acquisition under exceptional circumstances; language processing and syntactic change; parameter setting in acquisition and through creolization and language change; and a concluding part integrating the contributors' observations and proposals into a series of commentaries on the state of the art in our understanding of language development, its role in creolization and diachrony, and implications for linguistic theory. Contributors : Dany Adone, Derek Bickerton, Adrienne Bruyn, Marie Coppola, Michel DeGraff, Viviane Déprez, Alison Henry, Judy Kegl, David Lightfoot, John S. Lumsden, Salikoko S. Mufwene, Pieter Muysken, Elissa L. Newport, Luigi Rizzi, Ian Roberts, Ann Senghas, Rex A. Sprouse, Denise Tangney, Anne Vainikka, Barbara S. Vance, Maaïke Verrips.
