

MAKE SOMETHING UP: STORIES YOU CAN'T UNREAD BY CHUCK PALAHNIUK

DOWNLOAD EBOOK : MAKE SOMETHING UP: STORIES YOU CAN'T UNREAD
BY CHUCK PALAHNIUK PDF

Click link bellow and free register to download ebook:
MAKE SOMETHING UP: STORIES YOU CAN'T UNREAD BY CHUCK PALAHNIUK

DOWNLOAD FROM OUR ONLINE LIBRARY

MAKE SOMETHING UP: STORIES YOU CAN'T UNREAD BY CHUCK PALAHNIUK PDF

By downloading this soft documents publication Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk in the on the internet web link download, you remain in the initial step right to do. This site really offers you simplicity of how you can get the most effective e-book, from finest seller to the new released e-book. You could locate a lot more publications in this site by going to every web link that we give. One of the collections, Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk is one of the most effective collections to offer. So, the initial you get it, the very first you will certainly get all favorable concerning this e-book Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk

Review

Praise for Chuck Palahniuk and Make Something Up:

"Palahniuk doesn't write for tourists. He writes for hard-core devotees drawn to the wild, angry imagination on display and the taboo-busting humor."

—The New York Times

"Palahniuk is a bracingly toxic purveyor of dread and mounting horror. He makes nihilism fun."

—Vanity Fair

"Palahniuk displays a Swiftian gift for satire, as well as a knack for crafting mesmerizing sentences."

—San Francisco Examiner

"Few contemporary writers mix the outrageous and the hilarious with greater zest."

—Newsday

"Few authors have captured the pathologies of modern life quite like Palahniuk."

—Rocky Mountain News

"Chuck Palahniuk is one of the most intriguing writers of our time."

—Tucson Citizen

"For the first time, Palahniuk collects his short stories, which feature his signature humor, horror, and grit. [The] other stories deal with fire, bodily fluids, malfunctions, critiques of material society, bestiality, a bewitched tennis ball, and a murder at a Burning Man-type retreat. The collection is essential for Palahniuk fans and will likely win him some new ones."

—Publishers Weekly

"Palahniuk comes roaring back from a stretch of experimentalism with 23 tales celebrating his ongoing affection for the macabre... Pathos and panic and penitence from one of the darkest and most singular minds in contemporary American lit."

—Kirkus Reviews

"Even as you likely suffer debilitating motion sickness from the jarring emotional turns on every other page, you'll be inescapably restrained by an author who knows exactly what he's doing and has you right where he wants you. Palahniuk's uniquely modern style throws out any antiquated conventions that could keep him from destroying any expectations that keep you in complacent narrative comfort."

—Booklist

About the Author

CHUCK PALAHNIUK is the author of fourteen novels—Beautiful You, Doomed, Damned, Tell-All, Pygmy, Snuff, Rant, Haunted, Diary, Lullaby, Choke, Invisible Monsters, Survivor, and Fight Club—which have sold more than five million copies altogether in the United States. He is also the author of Fugitives and Refugees, published as part of the Crown Journey Series, and the nonfiction collection Stranger Than Fiction. He lives in the Pacific Northwest. Visit him on the web at chuckalahniuk.net.

Excerpt. © Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.

Knock-Knock

My old man, he makes everything into a Big Joke. What can I say? The old man loves to get a laugh. Growing up, half the time I didn't have a clue what his jokes were about, but I laughed anyways. Down at the barbershop, it didn't matter how many guys my father let take cuts ahead of him in line, he just wanted to sit there all Saturday and crack people up. Make folks bust a gut. Getting his hair cut was definitely a low priority.

He says, "Stop me if you've heard this one before .??.?" The way my old man tells it, he walks into the oncologist's office and he says, "After the chemotherapy, will I be able to play the violin?"

In response, the oncologist says, "It's metastasized. You've got six months to live .??.?"

And working his eyebrows like Groucho Marx, tapping the ash from an invisible cigar, my old man says, "Six months?" He says, "I want a second opinion."

So the oncologist, he says, "Okay, you've got cancer and your jokes stink."

So they do chemotherapy, and they give him some radiation like they do even if the shit burns him up so bad on the inside he tells me that taking a piss is like passing razor blades. He's still every Saturday down by the barbershop telling jokes even if now he's bald as a cue ball. I mean, he's skinny as a bald skeleton, and he's getting to haul around one of those cylinders of oxygen under pressure, like some little version of a ball-and-chain. He walks into the barbershop dragging that pressurized cylinder of oxygen with the tube of it going up and looping around his nose, over his ears, and around his bald head, and he says, "Just a little off the top, please." And folks laugh. Understand me: My old man is no Uncle Milty. He's no Edgar Bergen. The man's skinny as a Halloween skeleton and bald and going to be dead by six weeks so it don't matter what he says, folks are going to hee-haw like donkeys just out of their genuine affection for him.

But, seriously, I'm not doing him justice. It's my fault if this doesn't come across, but my old man is funnier than he sounds. Maybe his sense of humor is a talent I didn't inherit. Back when I was his little Charlie

McCarthy, the whole time growing up, he used to ask me, “Knock-knock?”

I’d say, “Who’s there?”

He’d say, “Old Lady .??.?”

I’d say, “Old Lady, who?”

And he’d say, “Wow, I didn’t know you could yodel!”

Me, I didn’t get it. I was so stupid, I was seven years old and still stuck in the first grade. I didn’t know Switzerland from Shinola, but I want for my old man to love me so I learned to laugh. Whatever he says, I laugh. By “Old Lady” my guess is he means my mom who ran away and left us. All’s my old man will say about her is how she was a “Real Looker” who just couldn’t take a joke. She just was NOT a Good Sport.

He used to ask me, “When that Vinnie van Gogh cut off his ear and sent it to the whore he was so crazy about, how’d he send it?”

The punch line is “He sent it by ‘ear mail,’?” but being seven years old, I was still stuck back on not knowing who van Gogh is or what’s a whore, and nothing kills a joke faster than asking my old man to explain himself. So when my old man says, “What do you get when you cross a pig with Count Dracula?” .??.?I knew to never ask, “What’s a ‘Count Dracula’?” I’d just get a big laugh ready for when he tells me, “A ‘Ham-pire’!”

And when he says, “Knock-knock .??.?”

And I say, “Who’s there?” And he says, “Radio.”

And I say, “Radio who?” And he’s ALREADY started to bust a gut when he says, “Radio not I’m going to cum in your mouth .??.?” Then—what the hell—I just keep laughing. My whole growing up I figure I’m just too ignorant to appreciate a good joke. Me, my teachers still haven’t covered long division and all the - multiple-cation tables so it’s not my old man’s fault I don’t know what’s “cum.”

My old lady, who abandoned us, he says she hated that joke so maybe I inherited her lack of humor. But love .??.?I mean you have to love your old man. I mean, after you’re born it’s not like you get a choice. Nobody wants to see their old man breathing out of some tank and going into the hospital to die sky-high on morphine and he’s not eating a bite of the red-flavored Jell-O they serve for dinner.

Stop me if I already told you this one: but my old man gets that prostrate cancer that’s not even like cancer because it takes twenty, thirty years before we even know he’s so sick, and the next thing I know is I’m trying to remember all the stuff he’s taught me. Like, if you spray some WD-40 on the shovel blade before you dig a hole the digging will go a lot easier. And he taught me how to squeeze a trigger instead of pulling it and wrecking my aim. He taught me to remove bloodstains. And he taught me jokes .??.?lots of jokes.

And, sure, he’s no Robin Williams, but I watched this movie one time about Robin Williams who gets dressed up with a red rubber ball on his nose and this big rainbow-colored afro wig and those big clown shoes with a fake carnation stuck in his buttonhole of his shirt that squirts water, and the guy’s a hotshot doctor who makes these little kids with cancer laugh so hard they stop dying. Understand me: These bald kid skeletons—who look worse off than my old man—they get HEALTHY, and that whole movie is based on a True Story.

What I mean is, we all know that Laughter is the Best Medicine. All that time being stuck in the hospital Waiting Room, even I read the Reader's Digest. And we've all heard the true story about the guy with a brain cancer the size of a grapefruit inside his skull and he's about to croak—all the doctors and priests and experts say he's a goner—only he forces himself to watch nonstop movies about the Three Stooges. This Stage Four cancer guy forces himself to laugh nonstop at Abbott and Costello and Laurel and Hardy and those Marx brothers, and he gets healed by the end-orphans and oxy-generated blood.

So I figure, what've I got to lose? All I need to do is remember some of my old man's favorite gags and get him started back laughing on the road to recovery. I figure, what could it hurt?

So this grown?up son walks into his father's hospice room, pulls up a chair beside the bed, and sits down. The son looks into his old man's pale, dying face and says: "So this blond gal walks into a neighborhood bar where she's never been before, and she's got tits out to HERE and a tight little heinie and she asks the bartender for a Michelob, and he serves her a Michelob, except he sneaks a Mickey Finn into her bottle and this blonde goes unconscious, and every guy in the bar leans her over the edge of the pool table and hikes up her skirt and fucks her, and at closing time they slap her awake and tell her she's got to leave. And every few days this gal with the tits and the ass walks in and asks for a Michelob and gets a Mickey Finn and gets fucked by the crowd until one day she walks in and asks the bartender, can he maybe give her a Budweiser instead?"

Granted—I have NOT landed this particular shaggy-dog story since I was in the first grade, but my old man used to love this next part .??.

The bartender smiles so nice and says, "What? You don't like Michelob no more?"

And this Real Looker, she leans over the bar, all confidential and she whispers, "Just between you and me .??" she whispers, "Michelob makes my pussy hurt .??"

The first time I learned that joke, when my old man taught it to me, I didn't know what was "pussy." I didn't know "Mickey Finn." I didn't know what folks meant when they talked about "fucking," but I knew all this talk made my old man laugh. And when he told me to stand up and tell that joke in the barbershop it made the barbers and every old man reading detective magazines laugh until half of them blew spit and snot and chewing tobacco out their noses.

Now the grown?up son tells his old dying father this joke, just the two of them alone in that hospital room, - late-late at night, and—guess what—his old man doesn't laugh. So the son tries another old favorite, he tells the joke about the Traveling Salesman who gets a phone call from some Farmer's Daughter he met on the road a couple months before, and she says, "Remember me? We had some laughs, and I was a good sport?" and the man says, "How're you doing?" and she says, "I'm pregnant, and I'm going to kill myself." And the salesman, he says, "Damn .??.?you ARE a good sport!"

At seven years old I could REALLY put that joke over—but, tonight the old man's still not laughing. How I learned to say "I Love You" was by laughing for my old man—even if I had to fake it—and that's all I want in return. All I want from him is a laugh, just one laugh, and he's not coming across with even a giggle. Not a snicker. Not even a groan. And worse than not-laughing, the old man squints his eyes shut, tight, and opens them brimming with tears, and one fat tear floods out the bottom of each eye and washes down each cheek. The old man's gasping his big toothless mouth like he can't get enough air, crying big tears down the wrinkles of both cheeks, just soaking his pillow. So this kid—who's nobody's little kid, not anymore—but who can't seem to forget these jokes, he reaches into his pants pocket and gets out a fake carnation flower that just-for-laugh sprays water all over the old crybaby's face.

The kid tells about the Polack who's carrying a rifle through the woods when he comes across a naked gal laying back on a bed of soft green moss with her legs spread, and this gal is a Real Looker, and she looks at the Polack and his gun and says, "What're you doing?" And the Polack says, "I'm hunting for game." And this Real Looker, she gives him a big wink and she says, "I'm game."

So—POW!—the Polack shoots her. It used to be this joke constituted a gold-plated, bona fide, sure-thing laugh riot, but the old man just keeps dying. He's still crying and not even making an effort to laugh, and no matter what, the old man has got to meet me halfway. I can't save him if he doesn't want to live. I ask him, "What do you get when you cross a faggot with a kike?" I ask him, "What's the difference between dog shit and a nigger?"

And he's still not getting any better. I'm thinking maybe the cancer's got into his ears. With the morphine and what all, it could be he can't hear me. So just to test, can he hear me, I lean into his crybaby face and I ask, "How do you get a nun pregnant?" Then, more loud, maybe too loud for this being a mackerel-snapper hospital, I yell, "You FUCK her!"

In my desperation I try fag jokes and wetback jokes and kike jokes—really, every effective course of treatment known to medical science—and the old man's still slipping away. Lying here, in this bed, is the man who made EVERYTHING into a Big Joke. Just the fact he's not biting scares the shit out of me. I'm yelling, "Knock-knock!" and when he says nothing in response it's the same as him not having a pulse. I'm yelling, "Knock-knock!"

I'm yelling, "Why did the Existentialist cross the road?"

And he's STILL dying, the old man's leaving me not knowing the answer to anything. He's abandoning me while I'm still so fucking stupid. In my desperation I reach out to take the limp, blue fingers of his cold-cold dying hand and he doesn't flinch even when I grind a Joy Buzzer against the blue skin of his ice-cold palm. I'm yelling, "Knock-knock?"

I'm yelling, "Why'd the Old Lady walk out on her husband and her four-year-old kid?"

Nothing kills a joke like asking my old man to explain himself, and lying there in that bed, he stops breathing. No heartbeat. Totally flatlined.

So this kid who's sitting bedside in this hospital room, late-late at night he takes the joke equivalent of those electric paddles doctors use to stop your heart attack, the hee-haw equivalent of what a paramedic Robin Williams would use on you in some Clown Emergency Room—a kind of Three Stooges defibrillator—the kid takes a big, creamy, heaped-up custard pie topped with a thick-thick layer of whipped cream, the same as Charlie Chaplin would save your life with, and the kid reaches that pie up sky-high overhead, as high as the kid can reach, and brings it down, hard, lightning-fast, slam-dunking it hard as the blast from a Polack's -shotgun—POW!—right in his old man's kisser.

And despite the miraculous, well-documented healing powers of the Comedic Arts my old man dies taking a big bloody shit in his bed.

No, really, it's funnier than it sounds. Please, don't blame my old man. If you're not laughing at this point, it's my fault. I just didn't tell it right, you know, you mess up a punch line and you can totally botch even the best joke. For example, I went back to the barbershop and told them how he died and how I tried to save him, right up to and including the custard pie and how the hospital had their security goons escort me up to the crazy ward for a little seventy-two-hour observation. And even telling that part, I fucked it up—because those barbershop guys just looked at me. I told them about seeing—and smelling—my old man, dead and smeared all over with blood and shit and whipped cream, all that stink and sugar, and they looked and looked at me, the barbers and the old guys chewing tobacco, and nobody laughed. Standing in that same barbershop all these years later, I say, “Knock-knock.”

MAKE SOMETHING UP: STORIES YOU CAN'T UNREAD BY CHUCK PALAHNIUK PDF

Download: MAKE SOMETHING UP: STORIES YOU CAN'T UNREAD BY CHUCK PALAHNIUK PDF

Simply for you today! Discover your preferred publication here by downloading and install as well as getting the soft documents of the publication Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk This is not your time to traditionally likely to guide shops to buy an e-book. Right here, selections of book Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk and also collections are readily available to download and install. One of them is this Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk as your preferred e-book. Getting this e-book Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk by online in this website could be recognized now by going to the link page to download. It will certainly be easy. Why should be right here?

It can be among your early morning readings Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk This is a soft documents publication that can be got by downloading from on-line book. As known, in this sophisticated age, innovation will certainly relieve you in doing some activities. Even it is merely reviewing the existence of book soft file of Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk can be additional attribute to open up. It is not just to open and save in the device. This time in the morning and other spare time are to check out guide Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk

Guide Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk will still make you favorable value if you do it well. Finishing the book Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk to read will certainly not become the only objective. The objective is by getting the positive value from guide up until the end of guide. This is why; you have to discover more while reading this Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk This is not only how quick you review a publication and not just has the number of you finished the books; it has to do with exactly what you have obtained from the books.

MAKE SOMETHING UP: STORIES YOU CAN'T UNREAD BY CHUCK PALAHNIUK PDF

Stories you'll never forget—just try—from literature's favorite transgressive author

Representing work that spans several years, Make Something Up is a compilation of 21 stories and one novella (some previously published, some not) that will disturb and delight. In "Expedition," fans will be thrilled to find to see a side of Tyler Durden never seen before in a precursor story to Fight Club. And in other stories, the absurdity of both life and death are on full display; in "Zombies," the best and brightest of a high school prep school become tragically addicted to the latest drug craze: electric shocks from cardiac defibrillators. In "Knock, Knock," a son hopes to tell one last off-color joke to a father in his final moments, while in "Tunnel of Love," a massage therapist runs the curious practice of providing 'relief' to dying clients.

Funny, caustic, bizarre, poignant; these stories represent everything readers have come to love and expect from Chuck Palahniuk.

- Sales Rank: #47579 in Books
- Published on: 2015-05-26
- Released on: 2015-05-26
- Original language: English
- Number of items: 1
- Dimensions: 8.53" h x 1.24" w x 5.76" l, 1.25 pounds
- Binding: Hardcover
- 336 pages

Review

Praise for Chuck Palahniuk and Make Something Up:

"Palahniuk doesn't write for tourists. He writes for hard-core devotees drawn to the wild, angry imagination on display and the taboo-busting humor."

—The New York Times

"Palahniuk is a bracingly toxic purveyor of dread and mounting horror. He makes nihilism fun."

—Vanity Fair

"Palahniuk displays a Swiftian gift for satire, as well as a knack for crafting mesmerizing sentences."

—San Francisco Examiner

"Few contemporary writers mix the outrageous and the hilarious with greater zest."

—Newsday

"Few authors have captured the pathologies of modern life quite like Palahniuk."

—Rocky Mountain News

"Chuck Palahniuk is one of the most intriguing writers of our time."

—Tucson Citizen

"For the first time, Palahniuk collects his short stories, which feature his signature humor, horror, and grit. [The] other stories deal with fire, bodily fluids, malfunctions, critiques of material society, bestiality, a bewitched tennis ball, and a murder at a Burning Man-type retreat. The collection is essential for Palahniuk fans and will likely win him some new ones."

—Publishers Weekly

"Palahniuk comes roaring back from a stretch of experimentalism with 23 tales celebrating his ongoing affection for the macabre... Pathos and panic and penitence from one of the darkest and most singular minds in contemporary American lit."

—Kirkus Reviews

"Even as you likely suffer debilitating motion sickness from the jarring emotional turns on every other page, you'll be inescapably restrained by an author who knows exactly what he's doing and has you right where he wants you. Palahniuk's uniquely modern style throws out any antiquated conventions that could keep him from destroying any expectations that keep you in complacent narrative comfort."

—Booklist

About the Author

CHUCK PALAHNIUK is the author of fourteen novels—Beautiful You, Doomed, Damned, Tell-All, Pygmy, Snuff, Rant, Haunted, Diary, Lullaby, Choke, Invisible Monsters, Survivor, and Fight Club—which have sold more than five million copies altogether in the United States. He is also the author of Fugitives and Refugees, published as part of the Crown Journey Series, and the nonfiction collection Stranger Than Fiction. He lives in the Pacific Northwest. Visit him on the web at chuckalahniuk.net.

Excerpt. © Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.

Knock-Knock

My old man, he makes everything into a Big Joke. What can I say? The old man loves to get a laugh. Growing up, half the time I didn't have a clue what his jokes were about, but I laughed anyways. Down at the barbershop, it didn't matter how many guys my father let take cuts ahead of him in line, he just wanted to sit there all Saturday and crack people up. Make folks bust a gut. Getting his hair cut was definitely a low priority.

He says, "Stop me if you've heard this one before .??.?" The way my old man tells it, he walks into the oncologist's office and he says, "After the chemotherapy, will I be able to play the violin?"

In response, the oncologist says, "It's metastasized. You've got six months to live .??.?"

And working his eyebrows like Groucho Marx, tapping the ash from an invisible cigar, my old man says, "Six months?" He says, "I want a second opinion."

So the oncologist, he says, "Okay, you've got cancer and your jokes stink."

So they do chemotherapy, and they give him some radiation like they do even if the shit burns him up so bad on the inside he tells me that taking a piss is like passing razor blades. He's still every Saturday down by the barbershop telling jokes even if now he's bald as a cue ball. I mean, he's skinny as a bald skeleton, and he's getting to haul around one of those cylinders of oxygen under pressure, like some little version of a ball-and-chain. He walks into the barbershop dragging that pressurized cylinder of oxygen with the tube of it going up and looping around his nose, over his ears, and around his bald head, and he says, "Just a little off the top, please." And folks laugh. Understand me: My old man is no Uncle Milty. He's no Edgar Bergen. The man's skinny as a Halloween skeleton and bald and going to be dead by six weeks so it don't matter what he says, folks are going to hee-haw like donkeys just out of their genuine affection for him.

But, seriously, I'm not doing him justice. It's my fault if this doesn't come across, but my old man is funnier than he sounds. Maybe his sense of humor is a talent I didn't inherit. Back when I was his little Charlie McCarthy, the whole time growing up, he used to ask me, "Knock-knock?"

I'd say, "Who's there?"

He'd say, "Old Lady .??.?"

I'd say, "Old Lady, who?"

And he'd say, "Wow, I didn't know you could yodel!"

Me, I didn't get it. I was so stupid, I was seven years old and still stuck in the first grade. I didn't know Switzerland from Shinola, but I want for my old man to love me so I learned to laugh. Whatever he says, I laugh. By "Old Lady" my guess is he means my mom who ran away and left us. All's my old man will say about her is how she was a "Real Looker" who just couldn't take a joke. She just was NOT a Good Sport.

He used to ask me, "When that Vinnie van Gogh cut off his ear and sent it to the whore he was so crazy about, how'd he send it?"

The punch line is "He sent it by 'ear mail,'?" but being seven years old, I was still stuck back on not knowing who van Gogh is or what's a whore, and nothing kills a joke faster than asking my old man to explain himself. So when my old man says, "What do you get when you cross a pig with Count Dracula?" .??.? I knew to never ask, "What's a 'Count Dracula'?" I'd just get a big laugh ready for when he tells me, "A 'Ham-pire'!"

And when he says, "Knock-knock .??.?"

And I say, "Who's there?" And he says, "Radio."

And I say, "Radio who?" And he's ALREADY started to bust a gut when he says, "Radio not I'm going to cum in your mouth .??.?" Then—what the hell—I just keep laughing. My whole growing up I figure I'm just too ignorant to appreciate a good joke. Me, my teachers still haven't covered long division and all the - multiple-cation tables so it's not my old man's fault I don't know what's "cum."

My old lady, who abandoned us, he says she hated that joke so maybe I inherited her lack of humor. But love .??.? I mean you have to love your old man. I mean, after you're born it's not like you get a choice. Nobody wants to see their old man breathing out of some tank and going into the hospital to die sky-high on morphine and he's not eating a bite of the red-flavored Jell-O they serve for dinner.

Stop me if I already told you this one: but my old man gets that prostrate cancer that's not even like cancer because it takes twenty, thirty years before we even know he's so sick, and the next thing I know is I'm trying to remember all the stuff he's taught me. Like, if you spray some WD-40 on the shovel blade before you dig a hole the digging will go a lot easier. And he taught me how to squeeze a trigger instead of pulling it and wrecking my aim. He taught me to remove bloodstains. And he taught me jokes .??.?lots of jokes.

And, sure, he's no Robin Williams, but I watched this movie one time about Robin Williams who gets dressed up with a red rubber ball on his nose and this big rainbow-colored afro wig and those big clown shoes with a fake carnation stuck in his buttonhole of his shirt that squirts water, and the guy's a hotshot doctor who makes these little kids with cancer laugh so hard they stop dying. Understand me: These bald kid skeletons—who look worse off than my old man—they get HEALTHY, and that whole movie is based on a True Story.

What I mean is, we all know that Laughter is the Best Medicine. All that time being stuck in the hospital Waiting Room, even I read the Reader's Digest. And we've all heard the true story about the guy with a brain cancer the size of a grapefruit inside his skull and he's about to croak—all the doctors and priests and experts say he's a goner—only he forces himself to watch nonstop movies about the Three Stooges. This Stage Four cancer guy forces himself to laugh nonstop at Abbott and Costello and Laurel and Hardy and those Marx brothers, and he gets healed by the end-orphans and oxy-generated blood.

So I figure, what've I got to lose? All I need to do is remember some of my old man's favorite gags and get him started back laughing on the road to recovery. I figure, what could it hurt?

So this grown?up son walks into his father's hospice room, pulls up a chair beside the bed, and sits down. The son looks into his old man's pale, dying face and says: "So this blond gal walks into a neighborhood bar where she's never been before, and she's got tits out to HERE and a tight little heinie and she asks the bartender for a Michelob, and he serves her a Michelob, except he sneaks a Mickey Finn into her bottle and this blonde goes unconscious, and every guy in the bar leans her over the edge of the pool table and hikes up her skirt and fucks her, and at closing time they slap her awake and tell her she's got to leave. And every few days this gal with the tits and the ass walks in and asks for a Michelob and gets a Mickey Finn and gets fucked by the crowd until one day she walks in and asks the bartender, can he maybe give her a Budweiser instead?"

Granted—I have NOT landed this particular shaggy-dog story since I was in the first grade, but my old man used to love this next part .??.?

The bartender smiles so nice and says, "What? You don't like Michelob no more?"

And this Real Looker, she leans over the bar, all confidential and she whispers, "Just between you and me .??.?" she whispers, "Michelob makes my pussy hurt .??.?"

The first time I learned that joke, when my old man taught it to me, I didn't know what was "pussy." I didn't know "Mickey Finn." I didn't know what folks meant when they talked about "fucking," but I knew all this talk made my old man laugh. And when he told me to stand up and tell that joke in the barbershop it made the barbers and every old man reading detective magazines laugh until half of them blew spit and snot and chewing tobacco out their noses.

Now the grown?up son tells his old dying father this joke, just the two of them alone in that hospital room, - late-late at night, and—guess what—his old man doesn't laugh. So the son tries another old favorite, he tells the joke about the Traveling Salesman who gets a phone call from some Farmer's Daughter he met on the road a couple months before, and she says, "Remember me? We had some laughs, and I was a good sport?" and the man says, "How're you doing?" and she says, "I'm pregnant, and I'm going to kill myself." And the salesman, he says, "Damn .??.?you ARE a good sport!"

At seven years old I could REALLY put that joke over—but, tonight the old man's still not laughing. How I learned to say "I Love You" was by laughing for my old man—even if I had to fake it—and that's all I want in return. All I want from him is a laugh, just one laugh, and he's not coming across with even a giggle. Not a snicker. Not even a groan. And worse than not-laughing, the old man squints his eyes shut, tight, and opens them brimming with tears, and one fat tear floods out the bottom of each eye and washes down each cheek. The old man's gasping his big toothless mouth like he can't get enough air, crying big tears down the wrinkles of both cheeks, just soaking his pillow. So this kid—who's nobody's little kid, not anymore—but who can't seem to forget these jokes, he reaches into his pants pocket and gets out a fake carnation flower that just-for-laughes sprays water all over the old crybaby's face.

The kid tells about the Polack who's carrying a rifle through the woods when he comes across a naked gal laying back on a bed of soft green moss with her legs spread, and this gal is a Real Looker, and she looks at the Polack and his gun and says, "What're you doing?" And the Polack says, "I'm hunting for game." And this Real Looker, she gives him a big wink and she says, "I'm game."

So—POW!—the Polack shoots her. It used to be this joke constituted a gold-plated, bona fide, sure-thing laugh riot, but the old man just keeps dying. He's still crying and not even making an effort to laugh, and no matter what, the old man has got to meet me halfway. I can't save him if he doesn't want to live. I ask him, "What do you get when you cross a faggot with a kike?" I ask him, "What's the difference between dog shit and a nigger?"

And he's still not getting any better. I'm thinking maybe the cancer's got into his ears. With the morphine and what all, it could be he can't hear me. So just to test, can he hear me, I lean into his crybaby face and I ask, "How do you get a nun pregnant?" Then, more loud, maybe too loud for this being a mackerel-snapper hospital, I yell, "You FUCK her!"

In my desperation I try fag jokes and wetback jokes and kike jokes—really, every effective course of treatment known to medical science—and the old man's still slipping away. Lying here, in this bed, is the man who made EVERYTHING into a Big Joke. Just the fact he's not biting scares the shit out of me. I'm yelling, "Knock-knock!" and when he says nothing in response it's the same as him not having a pulse. I'm yelling, "Knock-knock!"

I'm yelling, "Why did the Existentialist cross the road?"

And he's STILL dying, the old man's leaving me not knowing the answer to anything. He's abandoning me while I'm still so fucking stupid. In my desperation I reach out to take the limp, blue fingers of his cold-cold dying hand and he doesn't flinch even when I grind a Joy Buzzer against the blue skin of his ice-cold palm. I'm yelling, "Knock-knock?"

I'm yelling, "Why'd the Old Lady walk out on her husband and her four-year-old kid?"

Nothing kills a joke like asking my old man to explain himself, and lying there in that bed, he stops breathing. No heartbeat. Totally flatlined.

So this kid who's sitting bedside in this hospital room, late-late at night he takes the joke equivalent of those electric paddles doctors use to stop your heart attack, the hee-haw equivalent of what a paramedic Robin Williams would use on you in some Clown Emergency Room—a kind of Three Stooges defibrillator—the kid takes a big, creamy, heaped-up custard pie topped with a thick-thick layer of whipped cream, the same as Charlie Chaplin would save your life with, and the kid reaches that pie up sky-high overhead, as high as the kid can reach, and brings it down, hard, lightning-fast, slam-dunking it hard as the blast from a Polack's - shotgun—POW!—right in his old man's kisser.

And despite the miraculous, well-documented healing powers of the Comedic Arts my old man dies taking a big bloody shit in his bed.

No, really, it's funnier than it sounds. Please, don't blame my old man. If you're not laughing at this point, it's my fault. I just didn't tell it right, you know, you mess up a punch line and you can totally botch even the best joke. For example, I went back to the barbershop and told them how he died and how I tried to save him, right up to and including the custard pie and how the hospital had their security goons escort me up to the crazy ward for a little seventy-two-hour observation. And even telling that part, I fucked it up—because those barbershop guys just looked at me. I told them about seeing—and smelling—my old man, dead and smeared all over with blood and shit and whipped cream, all that stink and sugar, and they looked and looked at me, the barbers and the old guys chewing tobacco, and nobody laughed. Standing in that same barbershop all these years later, I say, “Knock-knock.”

Most helpful customer reviews

25 of 30 people found the following review helpful.

if Charlie Kaufman and Quentin Tarantino had a baby

By audrey frances

I've never read anything by Chuck Palahniuk before, though I have a couple of his books in my gigantic to-read pile that used to sit on the bedside table but now dominates the entire dresser top, and I love the movie Fight Club. So I thought this was a good opportunity to sample his writing, as this book contains 22 short stories and a novella.

First off let me say, pay attention to the subtitle: Stories You Can't Unread. And there are a few you might want to. These stories are rather savage and disturbing, but also funny and sometimes insightful, as if Charlie Kaufman and Quentin Tarantino had a baby. And then jabbed it with pins and abandoned it at a Burning Man festival. The protagonists are no prizes, usually men but not always, but the parents come off far worse. If there is a theme here (besides the mental defects of pervs) it is the brutal portrayal of bad parenting, time and again.

Do you know how sometimes a guy will get drunk and he'll tell the women around him, "If you only knew what guys think, you'd never talk to any of us again!" I feel like this is a glimpse into that world, from a barbershop that keeps pictures of murdered women under the dirty magazines to a high schooler who fulfills an essential service for the school beauties, this is not the way one wants to think of one's brothers and fathers.

At the same time it is creative and sometimes hysterical, adroit and playful. There's even a Tyler Durden prequel, which was pretty good, and there were quite a few punch line endings. I rated each story and came up with an average of 6.3/10. I enjoyed these stories, but also dreaded going back to the book, not sure if the next story would have me laughing or wanting to take a shower, or both. If you don't enjoy challenging reading, I would leave this alone, and even adventurous readers may find themselves pushing their limits.

While the back cover says this work "spans more than a decade", there is no information or commentary with the stories individually or the book as a whole, which would have been nice, though I can see the author might just want the work to speak for itself.

21 of 26 people found the following review helpful.

Dig for that Gem!

By Dr. E

I have loved Chuck Palahniuk since I read "Guts" as an undergraduate. That short story is one that remains with readers ... for life. I love the anecdote of Palahniuk conducting live readings of the piece and watching folks pass-out cold. If you have not read "Guts" ... get to it! Therefore, when I saw this collection, I was stoked.

As with all short-stories collections, there will be favorites and there will be "not-so-favorites." For me, I approach a collection such as this with the hope of finding one new breathing-taking piece that speaks to me. (And, then, I'll probably make a PDF of it and share it with my students). So think of reading this collection like searching for gem in the mountain-side ... you'll get an awful lot of dirt, but there might be that perfect specimen somewhere in there.

Now, obviously, many love Palahniuk for Fight Club (and for good reason). If your experience with this author is confined to that nuanced, complex piece of literature, do know that you won't find the same cavalcade postmodern delights here. Instead, you will probably find stories that make you truly uncomfortable (and that you will repeatedly consider abandoning). The discomfort here is pretty prevalent; therefore, if you do not enjoy being pushed outside of your comfort zone, you might find this experience unbearable. (The language and imagery is graphic. Not "Breaking Bad graphic" ... but truly, genuinely graphic).

I teach film and literature for a living (at the college-level). Some of these stories challenged my own tolerance ... one, in particular, I barely finished (and felt no catharsis or resolution at the conclusion ... which is fine ... that hollow feeling shows that Palahniuk is able to conjure those complex emotions).

If you revel in the bleakness of Bret Easton Ellis, this collection might work for you. Dig for that gem!

14 of 18 people found the following review helpful.

Without a doubt a must read for fans of Chuck Palahniuk, the rest of us should approach with caution...

By R.Suarez

"Build it. Burn it. Build it. Burn it. Worship and Destroy. The festival was civilization on Fast-Forward."

- Torcher

While I was familiar with Chuck Palahniuk, from the movie 'Fight Club', I had never read any of his books. A friend of mine, who is a longtime fan, always suggested that if I was to read one of his books I should approach it with caution. I decided to start this review by sharing the advice he gave me years ago.

'Make something up' is a compilation of 22 stories written throughout a decade (I understand some of these have been published before) As such, some of these tales suffer when compared to one another, there are some very good ones and some others feel like filler material. The opening story, 'Knock, knock', does a great job preparing the readers on what to expect from the rest of the book, what at first seems like a heart-warming story about a guy and his father, turns into a chaotic situation in the end.

The product description labels these stories as funny, caustic, bizarre and poignant. In my opinion? Those labels fall short to describe this work. Some of these stories you will wish you could unread. After reading the book and actually enjoying most of it I found myself wondering what does that say about me?

Either way, the humor and social commentary I enjoyed so much from 'Fight Club' is present throughout the book. Characters questioning their purpose and very existence while committing the most devious acts (some in the name of love) are the common denominator in these stories.

I do not mean to spoil anything so I don't want to get into details, having said that, 'Expedition' is being mentioned everywhere as it represents the return of Tyler Durden in a story prior to 'Fight Club', do not go into it expecting too much like I did, the story is quite good but my expectation was so high that the end result was a little bit underwhelming. There are some other good stories in this book, 'Zombies' is one of them, 'Why Coyote never had money for parking', 'Torcher' and my favorite, 'Inclinations'.

Enjoyable overall, it is without a doubt a must read for fans of Chuck Palahniuk, the rest of us should approach with caution...

See all 127 customer reviews...

MAKE SOMETHING UP: STORIES YOU CAN'T UNREAD BY CHUCK PALAHNIUK PDF

Taking into consideration the book Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk to check out is likewise required. You can decide on the book based upon the favourite styles that you like. It will certainly involve you to love reading other books Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk It can be additionally about the requirement that obliges you to review the book. As this Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk, you can find it as your reading publication, also your preferred reading publication. So, discover your favourite book here as well as get the connect to download and install the book soft documents.

Review

Praise for Chuck Palahniuk and Make Something Up:

"Palahniuk doesn't write for tourists. He writes for hard-core devotees drawn to the wild, angry imagination on display and the taboo-busting humor."

—The New York Times

"Palahniuk is a bracingly toxic purveyor of dread and mounting horror. He makes nihilism fun."

—Vanity Fair

"Palahniuk displays a Swiftian gift for satire, as well as a knack for crafting mesmerizing sentences."

—San Francisco Examiner

"Few contemporary writers mix the outrageous and the hilarious with greater zest."

—Newsday

"Few authors have captured the pathologies of modern life quite like Palahniuk."

—Rocky Mountain News

"Chuck Palahniuk is one of the most intriguing writers of our time."

—Tucson Citizen

"For the first time, Palahniuk collects his short stories, which feature his signature humor, horror, and grit. [The] other stories deal with fire, bodily fluids, malfunctions, critiques of material society, bestiality, a bewitched tennis ball, and a murder at a Burning Man-type retreat. The collection is essential for Palahniuk fans and will likely win him some new ones."

—Publishers Weekly

"Palahniuk comes roaring back from a stretch of experimentalism with 23 tales celebrating his ongoing affection for the macabre... Pathos and panic and penitence from one of the darkest and most singular minds in contemporary American lit."

—Kirkus Reviews

"Even as you likely suffer debilitating motion sickness from the jarring emotional turns on every other page, you'll be inescapably restrained by an author who knows exactly what he's doing and has you right where he wants you. Palahniuk's uniquely modern style throws out any antiquated conventions that could keep him from destroying any expectations that keep you in complacent narrative comfort."

—Booklist

About the Author

CHUCK PALAHNIUK is the author of fourteen novels—Beautiful You, Doomed, Damned, Tell-All, Pygmy, Snuff, Rant, Haunted, Diary, Lullaby, Choke, Invisible Monsters, Survivor, and Fight Club—which have sold more than five million copies altogether in the United States. He is also the author of Fugitives and Refugees, published as part of the Crown Journey Series, and the nonfiction collection Stranger Than Fiction. He lives in the Pacific Northwest. Visit him on the web at chuckpalahniuk.net.

Excerpt. © Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.

Knock-Knock

My old man, he makes everything into a Big Joke. What can I say? The old man loves to get a laugh. Growing up, half the time I didn't have a clue what his jokes were about, but I laughed anyways. Down at the barbershop, it didn't matter how many guys my father let take cuts ahead of him in line, he just wanted to sit there all Saturday and crack people up. Make folks bust a gut. Getting his hair cut was definitely a low priority.

He says, "Stop me if you've heard this one before .??.?" The way my old man tells it, he walks into the oncologist's office and he says, "After the chemotherapy, will I be able to play the violin?"

In response, the oncologist says, "It's metastasized. You've got six months to live .??.?"

And working his eyebrows like Groucho Marx, tapping the ash from an invisible cigar, my old man says, "Six months?" He says, "I want a second opinion."

So the oncologist, he says, "Okay, you've got cancer and your jokes stink."

So they do chemotherapy, and they give him some radiation like they do even if the shit burns him up so bad on the inside he tells me that taking a piss is like passing razor blades. He's still every Saturday down by the barbershop telling jokes even if now he's bald as a cue ball. I mean, he's skinny as a bald skeleton, and he's getting to haul around one of those cylinders of oxygen under pressure, like some little version of a ball-and-chain. He walks into the barbershop dragging that pressurized cylinder of oxygen with the tube of it going up and looping around his nose, over his ears, and around his bald head, and he says, "Just a little off the top, please." And folks laugh. Understand me: My old man is no Uncle Milty. He's no Edgar Bergen. The man's skinny as a Halloween skeleton and bald and going to be dead by six weeks so it don't matter what he says, folks are going to hee-haw like donkeys just out of their genuine affection for him.

But, seriously, I'm not doing him justice. It's my fault if this doesn't come across, but my old man is funnier than he sounds. Maybe his sense of humor is a talent I didn't inherit. Back when I was his little Charlie McCarthy, the whole time growing up, he used to ask me, "Knock-knock?"

I'd say, "Who's there?"

He'd say, "Old Lady .??.?"

I'd say, "Old Lady, who?"

And he'd say, "Wow, I didn't know you could yodel!"

Me, I didn't get it. I was so stupid, I was seven years old and still stuck in the first grade. I didn't know Switzerland from Shinola, but I want for my old man to love me so I learned to laugh. Whatever he says, I laugh. By "Old Lady" my guess is he means my mom who ran away and left us. All's my old man will say about her is how she was a "Real Looker" who just couldn't take a joke. She just was NOT a Good Sport.

He used to ask me, "When that Vinnie van Gogh cut off his ear and sent it to the whore he was so crazy about, how'd he send it?"

The punch line is "He sent it by 'ear mail,'?" but being seven years old, I was still stuck back on not knowing who van Gogh is or what's a whore, and nothing kills a joke faster than asking my old man to explain himself. So when my old man says, "What do you get when you cross a pig with Count Dracula?" .??.?I knew to never ask, "What's a 'Count Dracula'?" I'd just get a big laugh ready for when he tells me, "A 'Ham-pire'!"

And when he says, "Knock-knock .??.?"

And I say, "Who's there?" And he says, "Radio."

And I say, "Radio who?" And he's ALREADY started to bust a gut when he says, "Radio not I'm going to cum in your mouth .??.?" Then—what the hell—I just keep laughing. My whole growing up I figure I'm just too ignorant to appreciate a good joke. Me, my teachers still haven't covered long division and all the - multiple-cation tables so it's not my old man's fault I don't know what's "cum."

My old lady, who abandoned us, he says she hated that joke so maybe I inherited her lack of humor. But love .??.?I mean you have to love your old man. I mean, after you're born it's not like you get a choice. Nobody wants to see their old man breathing out of some tank and going into the hospital to die sky-high on morphine and he's not eating a bite of the red-flavored Jell-O they serve for dinner.

Stop me if I already told you this one: but my old man gets that prostrate cancer that's not even like cancer because it takes twenty, thirty years before we even know he's so sick, and the next thing I know is I'm trying to remember all the stuff he's taught me. Like, if you spray some WD-40 on the shovel blade before you dig a hole the digging will go a lot easier. And he taught me how to squeeze a trigger instead of pulling it and wrecking my aim. He taught me to remove bloodstains. And he taught me jokes .??.?lots of jokes.

And, sure, he's no Robin Williams, but I watched this movie one time about Robin Williams who gets dressed up with a red rubber ball on his nose and this big rainbow-colored afro wig and those big clown shoes with a fake carnation stuck in his buttonhole of his shirt that squirts water, and the guy's a hotshot doctor who makes these little kids with cancer laugh so hard they stop dying. Understand me: These bald kid skeletons—who look worse off than my old man—they get HEALTHY, and that whole movie is based on a True Story.

What I mean is, we all know that Laughter is the Best Medicine. All that time being stuck in the hospital Waiting Room, even I read the Reader's Digest. And we've all heard the true story about the guy with a brain cancer the size of a grapefruit inside his skull and he's about to croak—all the doctors and priests and experts say he's a goner—only he forces himself to watch nonstop movies about the Three Stooges. This Stage Four cancer guy forces himself to laugh nonstop at Abbott and Costello and Laurel and Hardy and those Marx brothers, and he gets healed by the end-orphans and oxy-generated blood.

So I figure, what've I got to lose? All I need to do is remember some of my old man's favorite gags and get him started back laughing on the road to recovery. I figure, what could it hurt?

So this grown-up son walks into his father's hospice room, pulls up a chair beside the bed, and sits down. The son looks into his old man's pale, dying face and says: "So this blond gal walks into a neighborhood bar where she's never been before, and she's got tits out to HERE and a tight little heinie and she asks the bartender for a Michelob, and he serves her a Michelob, except he sneaks a Mickey Finn into her bottle and this blonde goes unconscious, and every guy in the bar leans her over the edge of the pool table and hikes up her skirt and fucks her, and at closing time they slap her awake and tell her she's got to leave. And every few days this gal with the tits and the ass walks in and asks for a Michelob and gets a Mickey Finn and gets fucked by the crowd until one day she walks in and asks the bartender, can he maybe give her a Budweiser instead?"

Granted—I have NOT landed this particular shaggy-dog story since I was in the first grade, but my old man used to love this next part .??.

The bartender smiles so nice and says, "What? You don't like Michelob no more?"

And this Real Looker, she leans over the bar, all confidential and she whispers, "Just between you and me .??.?" she whispers, "Michelob makes my pussy hurt .??.?"

The first time I learned that joke, when my old man taught it to me, I didn't know what was "pussy." I didn't know "Mickey Finn." I didn't know what folks meant when they talked about "fucking," but I knew all this talk made my old man laugh. And when he told me to stand up and tell that joke in the barbershop it made the barbers and every old man reading detective magazines laugh until half of them blew spit and snot and chewing tobacco out their noses.

Now the grown-up son tells his old dying father this joke, just the two of them alone in that hospital room, - late-late at night, and—guess what—his old man doesn't laugh. So the son tries another old favorite, he tells the joke about the Traveling Salesman who gets a phone call from some Farmer's Daughter he met on the road a couple months before, and she says, "Remember me? We had some laughs, and I was a good sport?" and the man says, "How're you doing?" and she says, "I'm pregnant, and I'm going to kill myself." And the salesman, he says, "Damn .??.?you ARE a good sport!"

At seven years old I could REALLY put that joke over—but, tonight the old man's still not laughing. How I learned to say "I Love You" was by laughing for my old man—even if I had to fake it—and that's all I want in return. All I want from him is a laugh, just one laugh, and he's not coming across with even a giggle. Not a snicker. Not even a groan. And worse than not-laughing, the old man squints his eyes shut, tight, and opens them brimming with tears, and one fat tear floods out the bottom of each eye and washes down each cheek. The old man's gasping his big toothless mouth like he can't get enough air, crying big tears down the wrinkles of both cheeks, just soaking his pillow. So this kid—who's nobody's little kid, not anymore—but who can't seem to forget these jokes, he reaches into his pants pocket and gets out a fake carnation flower that just-for-laugh sprays water all over the old crybaby's face.

The kid tells about the Polack who's carrying a rifle through the woods when he comes across a naked gal laying back on a bed of soft green moss with her legs spread, and this gal is a Real Looker, and she looks at the Polack and his gun and says, “What’re you doing?” And the Polack says, “I’m hunting for game.” And this Real Looker, she gives him a big wink and she says, “I’m game.”

So—POW!—the Polack shoots her. It used to be this joke constituted a gold-plated, bona fide, sure-thing laugh riot, but the old man just keeps dying. He’s still crying and not even making an effort to laugh, and no matter what, the old man has got to meet me halfway. I can’t save him if he doesn’t want to live. I ask him, “What do you get when you cross a faggot with a kike?” I ask him, “What’s the difference between dog shit and a nigger?”

And he’s still not getting any better. I’m thinking maybe the cancer’s got into his ears. With the morphine and what all, it could be he can’t hear me. So just to test, can he hear me, I lean into his crybaby face and I ask, “How do you get a nun pregnant?” Then, more loud, maybe too loud for this being a mackerel-snapper hospital, I yell, “You FUCK her!”

In my desperation I try fag jokes and wetback jokes and kike jokes—really, every effective course of treatment known to medical science—and the old man’s still slipping away. Lying here, in this bed, is the man who made EVERYTHING into a Big Joke. Just the fact he’s not biting scares the shit out of me. I’m yelling, “Knock-knock!” and when he says nothing in response it’s the same as him not having a pulse. I’m yelling, “Knock-knock!”

I’m yelling, “Why did the Existentialist cross the road?”

And he’s STILL dying, the old man’s leaving me not knowing the answer to anything. He’s abandoning me while I’m still so fucking stupid. In my desperation I reach out to take the limp, blue fingers of his cold-cold dying hand and he doesn’t flinch even when I grind a Joy Buzzer against the blue skin of his ice-cold palm. I’m yelling, “Knock-knock?”

I’m yelling, “Why’d the Old Lady walk out on her husband and her four-year-old kid?”

Nothing kills a joke like asking my old man to explain himself, and lying there in that bed, he stops breathing. No heartbeat. Totally flatlined.

So this kid who’s sitting bedside in this hospital room, late-late at night he takes the joke equivalent of those electric paddles doctors use to stop your heart attack, the hee-haw equivalent of what a paramedic Robin Williams would use on you in some Clown Emergency Room—a kind of Three Stooges defibrillator—the kid takes a big, creamy, heaped-up custard pie topped with a thick-thick layer of whipped cream, the same as Charlie Chaplin would save your life with, and the kid reaches that pie up sky-high overhead, as high as the kid can reach, and brings it down, hard, lightning-fast, slam-dunking it hard as the blast from a Polack’s -shotgun—POW!—right in his old man’s kisser.

And despite the miraculous, well-documented healing powers of the Comedic Arts my old man dies taking a big bloody shit in his bed.

No, really, it’s funnier than it sounds. Please, don’t blame my old man. If you’re not laughing at this point, it’s my fault. I just didn’t tell it right, you know, you mess up a punch line and you can totally botch even the best joke. For example, I went back to the barbershop and told them how he died and how I tried to save him, right up to and including the custard pie and how the hospital had their security goons escort me up to the crazy ward for a little seventy-two-hour observation. And even telling that part, I fucked it up—because those barbershop guys just looked at me. I told them about seeing—and smelling—my old man, dead and smeared all over with blood and shit and whipped cream, all that stink and sugar, and they looked and looked at me, the barbers and the old guys chewing tobacco, and nobody laughed. Standing in that same barbershop all these years later, I say, “Knock-knock.”

By downloading this soft documents publication Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk in the on the internet web link download, you remain in the initial step right to do. This site really offers you simplicity of how you can get the most effective e-book, from finest seller to the new released e-book. You could locate a lot more publications in this site by going to every web link that we give. One of the collections, Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk is one of the most effective collections to offer. So, the initial you get it, the very first you will certainly get all favorable concerning this e-book Make Something Up: Stories You Can't Unread By Chuck Palahniuk